

Intro

Soaring above the Las Vegas strip, two imposing towers intrigue and mystify tourists and locals alike. One stands for opulence, the other for decadence - heaven and hell, sin and perfection. Everything you could ever ask for in a city known for keeping its secrets.

Heaven Tower

The Heaven Tower floats toward the sky as if it belongs amongst the clouds. Waiting inside...the living definition of Heaven on Earth. Every dream is made reality, any wish will come true, the true meaning of decadence. In the day this sleek building glistens in the Nevada sun. At night it is just as graceful, a divine light radiates from within, casting a stunning blue glow onto the Strip below.

Hell Tower

Hell Tower is a monstrous building that appears to have exploded to the surface from the earth's core. This monolithic tribute to debauchery and sin is imposing enough during the day but at night it emits an eerie glow that could only be made by something that came from the molten hot center of the underworld.

Lagoon Show

Even among the hustle and bustle of the strip it's impossible to ignore the firestorms and dazzling water display of the lagoon show in front of the Heaven & Hell towers. The resort comes to life with a nightly war between the realms of good and evil. Fountains of shape shifting fire engulf the lagoon and rapidly spread to the Hell tower, erupting in massive inferno atop the colossal structure. An inspiring spectacle of dancing water transforms into a blinding blue light that climbs from the lagoon, overtaking the Heaven tower. The spectacular can be seen from both towers as well as the viewing areas and pedestrian bridges in front of the resort.

Lobby and Atrium

After passing over the lagoon and entering the lobby you are immediately confronted by the split personalities of the Heaven & Hell Casino. To the right of the space, the check in desk appears as a sleek white entity, floating on a beam of ethereal blue light. Across the way the Concierge's counter has been asked to return to Earth and the once sleek structure has now begun its decent back into the netherworld. Peering through the glass ceiling you can see the spectacular Heaven Tower to the right, soaring upward towards infinity and the alluring Hell Tower waiting to the left. Ahead, a wall of fire clashes with a wall of water, on either side, a choice - Heaven or Hell.

Once through the tunnel you are greeted by an immense space, an atrium lobby that extends in all directions. At the center of the lobby is a humongous sculpture, a representation of hell rising from the center of the Earth to declare war on Heaven. It is met by an equally immense chandelier, which descends downward from the clouds, emitting the same ethereal glow that is present throughout the Heaven tower. Overhead the powers of good and evil are locked in eternal battle, bright blue skies fight to overcome the attack of black and ominous storm clouds. From the atrium area the casino floors can be seen extending below the towers and beyond. This large multilevel space is a point of convergence for those who have chosen opulence or indulgence. Rising above and into the clouds is the elevator to Heaven, across the room you can see down into Temptation, a bar firmly planted within the realm of sin, expanding far below the rest of the open lobby.

As paths diverge from the atrium, one heads right and the other veers left. The path to the left travels downward through Hell – the colors are deep reds accented in black. The floor glows with the fading light of burning embers, peeking out from behind tiles of black volcanic stone. Burning orange flames flow across the wall, reading your mind as you pass by, morphing into shapes and objects that spell out your deepest desires. Immediately you realize that this is a place where cravings become reality, no matter how sinful they are. As you approach the elevator you see that this is not your average elevator...this is the gateway to a realm of temptation and sin. Sinners go to Hell for fun and this elevator travels straight down to a fiery playground of excess and vice.

The path to the right travels higher, through a lavish space of light, luxury and extravagance. It flows seamlessly through the environment, seemingly floating through the lobby and around objects that also appear to be hovering just above the ground, giving the entire space a sense of floating on air. The colors are a clean and light combination of white and silver accented by light blues and blue and white lighting. You feel as if anything you desire could instantly materialize out of the ever-present celestial glow radiating from everything around you. Once you've crossed over into the elevator you ascend into a realm of opulence, where you are spoiled with all of the luxuries you deserve.

Heaven Room

Once you reach your Heaven Tower suite you can look down on earth from the clouds. This temple of luxury allows you the opportunity to sleep in pure weightlessness, bathe in the natural light let in by the glass walls of the tower, and bathe in the glowing water of the suites rain shower. Like the rest of heaven, clean lines and a light aesthetic defines this space. Cloth materials are, plush, soft, lush and smooth. Hard surfaces are clean, light and graceful. When you finally decide to retire from your night of lavish partying you can do so under the fiber optic stars embedded into the ceiling.

Hell Room

For those who chose the left path and made the decent into the pit of lust and debauchery you are welcomed into your Hell Tower room by pallet of deep reds and black along with plenty of mirrors on the wall and ceiling to open the space. Through the windows of the tower you can gaze out on the city of sin or watch scantily clad bodies fill the pools in the courtyard below. Every corner of this space is meant to stimulate your cravings for all things sinful – from showers that rain fire to the large brass poles that extend from floor to ceiling in the corner of the room.

The underside of the bed glows with the familiar light of the burning embers found throughout the rest of the Hell Tower. Projected flames erotically dance along the walls. The burgundy silk sheets could make for a restful nights sleep but in the house of sin, these extra large beds are more often used for other iniquitous pleasures. Lucky the ornately carved black bedframe is strong enough to support more than the average bed.

Pool Area

Placed underneath the shadow of the dueling towers is the resorts outdoor and pool area. With ample space to soak up the harsh Las Vegas rays, the pool area is also an ideal place to cool off in Divinity, the largest pool at the resort. In the daytime Divinity's cabanas are great places to get drink service and cool off in the shade. At night, the edge of the pool seems to float effortlessly over the water as it comes to life with the same holy glow radiating from the tower itself.

Across from Divinity is Corruption, a pool and large hot tub that appear as if they burst through the ground along with Hell Tower. Large rock formations jet up from the Earth and line the edges of the pool, which appears as a giant hot spring in the middle of the Las Vegas desert. In the center of the pool are two tall rock formations that ride up from the water to release fire from the underworld into the air. At night the pool glows with an eerie red orange glow, almost as if it were actually molten lava.

Although both sides have their own respective bars, Final Destination is the primary bar for the pool area. Each side of the bar sells drinks themed to Heaven or Hell, the bartenders are very loyal to their chosen side, every once in a while it's fun to pit them against each other to see who makes better drinks.
